

THE LONDON SCHOOL
OF ECONOMICS AND
POLITICAL SCIENCE ■

Gendering the Social Sciences:
A Gender Institute Public Lecture

Sexual Politics and Revolution: Emma Goldman's Passion

Clare Hemmings

Professor of Feminist Theory, LSE Gender Institute

Monday 11 March 2013
6.30-8pm

Sheikh Zayed Theatre, New Academic Building, LSE

Chaired by Professor Anne Phillips

This paper charts the significance of Emma Goldman's revolutionary thought for a contemporary analysis of sexuality, gender and revolt. Throughout her life (1869-1940) and work Goldman centred sexuality as both key to how capitalism functions (particularly for women) and as a privileged site for political transformation. Connecting sexuality to labour, Goldman's analyses of reproduction, prostitution, homosexuality and free love provide a helpful challenge to contemporary feminist investments in materialist and cultural analyses as opposed, and open up the possibility of an alternative feminist history with sexual materialism at its heart...

Open to all – no booking required. Twitter Hashtag: #LSEhemmings