Transition Sunnyside, the first specifically “Transition Neighborhood” in the world, is part of a worldwide movement seeking to create resilient communities in the face of energy descent and other challenges. It is sponsored by the Sunnyside Neighborhood Association’s Sustainability Committee, The Sunnyside Neighborhood Association and Transition PDX / Transition US. The purpose of Transition Sunnyside is to enhance the health, security and happiness of each and every neighbor through shifting our patterns of living away from a heavy reliance on fossil fuels (oil, gas, grid-supplied electricity) and toward more local alternatives for food, transport, household and business energy, and water.

Rich Albertson, author of The Sky is the Limit: A Brief and Easy Explanation of Climate Change

Come hear Rich explain, in easy terms, why the basic assumptions scientists offer about the natural world and a “Carbon Reduction” strategy will not stop or even slow climate change down. He also discusses why government cannot fix the problem, but what we can do locally to start fixing it for ourselves. Go to www.thecircleworks.org for the 2-page introduction to the book.

Water Harvesting workshop

Peter Nierengarten, co-chair of Transition Sunnyside and engineer at the City of Portland Water Bureau, will offer a hands-on workshop on water harvesting at the home of a Sunnyside neighbor. Time, date and location will be posted on our website (sunnysideneighborhood.com) and in the Sunnyside Neighborhood newsletter.
